ON THE COVER: This month's cover artist, renowned portrait photographer Greg Gorman, captured this image of actor Elijah Wood during a promotional run for The Lord of the Rings - The Fellowship of the Ring. Done for Interview magazine, the photograph is a seeming contradiction to both Wood's trademark feature and Gorman's usual style. "One of Elijah Wood's strongest features are his eyes," says Gorman. "It's almost an oxymoron to have him with his eyes closed. In my portraits, I often focus on the eyes. But this was an interesting moment that just happened, and it made for a powerful image." The portrait was one of the last images Gorman shot on film. Using a Hasselblad medium-format camera with a 180mm lens, Gorman exposed Kodak Professional Plus-X film before scanning the image to digital format on an Imacon Flextight 848 scanner.
